LIST OF CONTRIBUTORS

Takashi FUJITANI is associate professor of history at the University of California, San Diego. His research focuses primarily on the history of military culture, nationalism, the monarchy, colonialism, racism and ethnicity in modern and contemporary Japan. He has published Tennō no pējento (NHK Books, 1994), Splendid Monarchy (University of California Press, 1996), and numerous articles in Japanese and U.S. journals. He is also co-editor of the forthcoming volume, Perilous Memories: The Asia Pacific War(s) (Duke University Press, in press).

David L. HOWELL is associate professor of history and east Asian studies at Princeton University. He works on the social and economic history of Japan during Tokugawa and Meiji periods, and is particularly interested in problems of social status and ethnicity. His publications include Capitalism from Within: Economy, Society and the State in a Japanese Fishery (University of California Press, 1995), "Ainu Ethnicity and the Boundaries of the Early Modern Japanese State," Past and Present (February 1994), and "Territoriality and Collective Identity in Tokugawa Japan," Daedalus (Summer 1998).

Peter KLEINEN received an M.A. in Japanese History from Bonn University, where he is now research associate (Wissenschaftlicher Mitarbeiter) at the Institute of Japanese Studies. He focuses on the history of religion in early-modern and modern Japan and has published Nichiren-Shugi: Zum Verhältnis von Nichiren-Buddhismus und japanischem Nationalismus am Beispiel von Tanaka Chigaku (1861–1939) (Philipp Franz von Siebold Stiftung Deutsches Institut für Japanstudien, 1994). Currently he is completing his Ph.D. with a dissertation on "The Chōshū Faction of the Nishi Honganji and the Nation, 1853–1895: A Historical Case Study on the Genesis and Discursive Construction of National Identity in Modern Japan."

KURIMOTO Eisei is associate professor at the National Museum of Ethnology. He is a social anthropologist and has conducted research in North East Africa. His major research interests include conflict, forced migration, ethnicity and the state, and history. He has published Minzoku funsō o ikiru hitobito—gendai Afurika no kokka to mainoriti (Sekai Shisōsha, 1996) and Mikai no sensō, gendai no sensō (Iwanami Shoten, 1999), and has co-edited Conflict, Age and Power in North East Africa: Age Systems in Transition (James Currey, 1998) and Shokuminchi keiken—jinruigaku to rekishigaku no apurōchi (Jinbun Shoin, 1999).

Margaret MEHL is associate professor at the Scottish Centre for Japanese Studies, University of Stirling. She has carried out research on the making of national history in modern Japan, and has published Eine Vergangenheit für die Japanische Nation. Die Entstehung des historischen Forschungsinstituts Tōkyō daigaku shiryō hensanjo (1869–1895) (Verlag Peter Lang, 1992) and History and State in Nineteenth-Century Japan (Macmillan, 1998), and other articles.

MURATA Yūjirō is associate professor of Chinese studies at the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences, University of Tokyo. He studied the history of Chinese philosophy at the University of Tokyo and Beijing University in China. His current research is focused on the formation of linguistic nationalism in modern China. He is a co-editor of Gendai Chūgoku jiten (Encyclopedia of Contemporary China) and has written extensively on the history of modern Chinese thought.

TOMIYAMA Ichirō is associate professor in the Faculty of Letters, Osaka University. His research focuses on the relationship between Japanese colonialism and the writing of it. His recent publications include Senjō no kioku (Nihon Keizai Hyōronsha, 1995). He is on the editorial collective of Inter-Asia Cultural Studies (Routledge).

UMESAO Tadao is the founding Director-General of the National Museum of Ethnology, and is now the President of Senri Foundation. For his long-time service as a distinguished ethnologist, the government of Japan awarded him the Bunka Kunshō (Cultural Medal) in 1994 and the Kun'ittō Zuihōshō (First Order of the Sacred Treasure) in 1999. He has published numerous books and articles on ethnology and comparative studies of civilization. Many of his writings have been republished in the twenty-three volume Umesao Tadao chosakushū (Chūō Kōronsha, 1989–94).

YAMAMURO Shin'ichi is professor at the Institute for Research in Humanities, Kyoto University. He has carried out research on the history of Japanese political and legal rights. He has published Hōsei kanryō no jidai (Bokutakusha, 1984) and Kimera—Manshūkoku no Shōzō (Chūō Kōronsha, 1993), and co-edited Gakumon to chishikijin (Iwanami Shoten, 1988) and Mei roku zasshi (Iwanami Shoten, 1999).
