Abbatial Successions of the Colleges of gSang phu sNe’u thog Monastery

Shunzo ONODA*

The importance of the gSang phu seminary in the later development of Tibetan Buddhism is now recognized by modern scholars, as is the crucial influence its teachers exercised on the scholastic thinking and methods of the other schools of Tibetan Buddhism. The monastery was originally founded at gSang phu sNe’u thog in 1073 by rNgog Legs pa’i shes rab, who was an immediate disciple of Atiśa (982–1054). It produced a large number of scholars including the true founder of its scholastic tradition, the famous translator rNgog Blo ldan shes rab (1059–1109), who was a nephew of Legs pa’i shes rab. It also produced the dialectical “revolutionary” Phya pa Chos kyi seng ge (1109–1169), who left his special mark on the epistemological traditions of the later periods of Tibetan Buddhism. These two masters more than any others established the greatness of the monastery. One of the complexities of this monastery was that it was later divided into two autonomous parts, and these in turn were divided into smaller “colleges.” In the present study I would like to present the available accounts of the abbatial successions of these colleges.

Some ten or fifteen years after Phya pa Chos kyi seng ge’s death in 1169, the monastery split into two: the upper monastery (Gling stod) and the lower monastery (Gling smad). After this separation, gSang phu sNe'u thog monastery slowly changed its organization. By the mid-15th century both monasteries had become organized as a cluster of grwa tshangs or almost self-supported colleges. According to later historical works [VDSP 126; TDKB 1156], there were two dGe lugs pa colleges and three Sa skya pa ones in the upper monastery: in all, five colleges belonged to this monastery. In the lower monastery there were two dGe lugs pa colleges and three Sa skya pa colleges along with two colleges which did not belong to either of these two sects, and so we can count in all seven colleges in the lower monastery. These can be listed as follows:

Belonging to Gling sTod
(a) Nyi ma thang grwa tshang (dGe lugs)
(b) sBe ser grwa tshang (dGe lugs)
(c) rNam ra ba Dwags po grwa tshang (Sa skya)
(d) rNam rgyal gSer khang grwa tshang (Sa skya)
(e) Khu be grwa tshang (Sa skya)

Belonging to Gling sMad
(f) Ra ba stod grwa tshang (dGe lugs)
(g) Nyang rong grwa tshang (dGe lugs)
(h) Ra ba smad grwa tshang (Sa skya)
(i) Phreng po zhi grwa tshang (Sa skya)
(j) 'Phan yul gNas sgo grwa tshang (Sa skya)
(k) sGros rnying grwa tshang
(l) sGros gsar grwa tshang

Of these 12 colleges, we can find some references in the VDSP, KDSN, STCB, etc., concerning the dGe lugs pa colleges, but for others almost nothing is known except the following fragmentary reports. Both (k) sGros rnying and (l) sGros gsar colleges attached to Gling smad were organized independently and were not even subsequently connected with either the Sa skya pa or dGe lugs pa sects. Both founders of the two colleges were disciples of the same master, 'Jam dbyangs 'Od zer mgon po, who was the 7th abbot of the lower monastery. The founder of sGros rnying was Śākya gzhon nu, who succeeded 'Jam dbyang 'Od zer mgon po as the abbot of the lower monastery. The founder of sGros gsar college was Kha rag pa Byang chub gzhon nu. There is no available source which records the succession of the abbots of these two colleges. It is said that Kha rag pa also founded a monastery called E wam monastery.

As far as the Sa skya pa colleges are concerned, the founder of (c) rNam ra ba Dwags po college was Byams pa Kun dga’ bkra shis. According to the VDSP, while acting as abbot of the upper monastery, he founded Dwags po college. Later, he moved to dGa’ ldan monastery as the abbot of Byang rtse college [VDSP 86]. Since the former abbot of Byang rtse had died in 1447, the Dwags po college must have already been founded by this time.

The founder of (h) Ra ba smad college is said to have been sDe bdun pa bsTan pa rab gsal. According to VDSP, the sixth abbot of dGa’ ldan monastery, the famous Ba so chos rje Chos kyi rgyal mtshan (1402–1473), had once been an abbot of this Ra ba smad college [VDSP 88]. Also his disciple Legs pa chos ‘byor (1429–1503), who was the eighth abbot of ’Bras spungs monastery, had once been an abbot of Ra ba smad college. Shes rab dpal ldan, the 28th abbot of the lower college, is said to have once been an abbot of Ra ba smad college. Ra ba smad “college” too has a permanent home near Gongkar, in the village of Ra ba smad.

THE ABBATIAL SUCCESSION OF FOUR COLLEGES

Now, let us establish here the chronology of these four dGe lugs pa colleges whose gdan rabs are preserved in such sources as the VDSP and KDSN. The VDSP of Sangs rgyas rgya mtsho states that (a) Nyi ma thang and (b) sBe ser were founded at the same time. bSod nams grags pa, the author of KDSN, had trained at Nyi ma thang college.

(a) Nyi ma thang

The abbatial succession of Nyi ma thang college can be listed as follows:

(a) 1 lDan ma Blo gros rgya mtsho
(a) 2 gNyal chen Shes rab rgyal mtshan
   According to KDSN [KDSN 401], this gNyal chen pa was a disciple of Tsong kha pa. He also founded Phag mo chos sde monastery with the help of Nang so bSod nams rgyal mtshan.
(a) 3 Chos rje dGe rgyal ba
(a) 4 mKhas mchog pa
(a) 5 Gung ru Chos bzang
(a) 6 gNyal pa sTon bsod
(a) 7 Drung Shes rab bkra shis
(a) 8 Chen po dPal she
(a) 9 rDo rje seng ge
(a) 10 ’Jam dbyangs shes rab (1450–1517)
   He was the 12th abbot of dGa’ ldan monastery, and was born in E phyogs and became abbot of dGa’ ldan in 1510. According to VDSP, he had studied under Shes rab bkra shis, the 7th abbot of Nyi ma thang college, and occupied the abbatial seat of Nyi ma thang for 20 years [VDSP 71]. According to KDSN, his name was Shes rab dar legs pa’i blo gros.
(a) 11 Shar kha rab ’byams pa Sangs legs pa
(a) 12 Slob dpon bSod nams rgya mtsho
(a) 13 Chen po Legs don
   He was probably the same person as mNga’ ris pa Legs pa don grub, the 35th abbot of the upper monastery. He was the abbot when DKSN was composed (1529).
(a) 14 rTses dang dPal 'byor
(a) 15 Gung ru bSod nams rgyal mtshan
(a) 16 E ba rab 'byams pa Byams pa brtan pa
(a) 17 rTses dang dNgos grub rgya mtsho
(a) 18 Mang thos dPal 'byor lhun grub
(a) 19 Gung ru Kun dga' rin chen
(a) 20 Byams pa gling 'Phrin las rgya mtsho
(a) 21 Slob dpon Blo gros rgyal mtshan
(a) 22 sTod lung Thub bstan rnam rgyal
(a) 23 mNyes thang Blo rgyam
(a) 24 Gra pa Byams pa blo bsal
(a) 25 bsNon Shes dpal
(a) 26 Nyag re Blo bzang chos grags
(a) 27 Sog po Shes rab sbyin pa
(a) 28 lHo brag pa Phun tshogs yon tan
(a) 29 lHo brag pa Phun tshogs seng ge

He was the abbot when VDSP was composed (1698)

According to the KDSN, there was a person named gNyal rgod Rin bsam who had been teaching at sBe ser, but no particulars are reported. gNyal rgod Rin bsam had been a teacher of Byams dbyangs chos rje, the founder of 'Bras spungs monastery, in his initial trainings at gSang phu.

(b) sBe ser College

The abbatial succession of sBe ser college can be listed as follows:
(b) 1 Byang sems Rwa sgreng pa Šākya bsod nams (1375–1442)
Šākya bsod nams was born in Rwa sgreng in 1375, the same year in which Tsong kha pa was born. After retiring as the abbot of sBe ser, he studied the “Lam rim” under Tsong kha pa [KDSN 399].
(b) 2 Chos rje rGyal mtshan bzang po (or mTshungs med chos rje) (1383–1450)
He was the 3rd grand abbot of Se ra monastery [VDSP 118] and the author of the rJe'i rnam thar mdun legs ma'i 'grel ba [KASCHEWSKY 1971: 30].
(b) 3 Chos rje dPal ldan seng
The same as dPal ldan seng ge, the 25th abbot of the upper monastery (?)
(b) 4 Chos rje Rin chen byang chub
The same as Gung ru Rin chen byang chub, the 27th abbot of the upper monastery (?)
(b) 5 gNyal ston dPal 'byor lhun grub (1427–1514)
When he was 55 years old, i.e. in 1481, he moved to Se ra monastery as its 8th grand abbot. During his initial training in sBe ser college, he was a rival of the famous Sa skya pa scholar Šākya mchog ldan [VDSP 199]
Abbatial Successions of gSang phu Monastery

(b) 6 Chos rje Co ne pa (or Ne tso ba)
(b) 7 Slob dpon Nyi ma grags
(b) 8 Me ru mkhan po
(b) 9 Chen po Chos she ba
(b) 10 Slob dpon mkhas btsun pa
(b) 11 Shes rab nyi ma

He was abbot when the KDSN was composed (1529).

(b) 12 Ratnadhvadza
(b) 13 Gung ru Kun rin
(b) 14 Blo gros rgya mtsho
(b) 15 Gyal byed pa Grags pa
(b) 16 Gung ru Dzun chen
(b) 17 sNye mo ba Rin chen bkra shis
(b) 18 mNga’ ris pa Blo bzang chos dar
(b) 19 sKyar bo Blo bzang dam chos
(b) 20 'Phyong rgyas Ngag dbang rnam rgyal
(b) 21 Nyag re sHun grub rgya mtsho
(b) 22 Drung chen Ngag dbang rnam rgyal
(b) 23 Blo bzang chos dar pa

He was abbot when the VDSP was composed.

(f) Ra ba stod College

The abbatial succession of the Ra stod college can be listed as follows:

(f) 1 Slob dpon Seng ge ri bong
(f) 2 Chos rje Grags bzang ba

According to KDSN, this Grags bzang ba was born in dMar khams and studied under Rong ston (1367-1449) and Tsong kha pa (1357-1419). He was also known by the name of mKhyen rab dbang phyug. After retiring as abbot of Ra ba stod college, he founded Byang kha college in gTsang province [KDSN 396].

(f) 3 Yon tan rgya mtsho

He was a disciple of rGyal tshab rje. He also occupied the general throne of the lower monastery as its 33rd abbot [KDSN 397].

(f) 4 Thugs rje dpal ba
(f) 5 Tshul rgyal ba
(f) 6 sDe bdun pa

He was a disciple of Yon tan rgya mtsho, the 3rd abbot. He is possibly the same person as sDe bdun pa bsTan pa rab gsal, the founder of Ra ba smad pa college, but there is no definite source for this identification.

(f) 7 Slob dpon Dri med pa
(f) 8 Pan chen mChog lha 'od zer (1429-1500)

'Jam dbyang bla ma Phyogs la 'od zer or Shangs dge 'phel ba Phyogs las
'od zer was the author of the famous Ra stod bs dus grwa. We can find his brief life story in the KDSN. According to it, mChog lha 'od zer was born in the Shangs area in 1429, and studied at Ra ba stod pa under mKhyen rab dbang phyug and Yon tan rgya mtsho, then continued his study under dGe 'dun grub. After that he moved back to Ra ba stod pa college as its abbot. The VDSP mentions that Blo bzang nyi ma, the former abbot, retired in 1490 (to become abbot of dGa’ ldan). KDSN mentions that mChog lha 'od zer died in 1500. These two points are supported by SPDR which records that he occupied the abbatial seat for 11 years.

(f) 9 Slob dpon bsTan pa rgyal mtshan
(f) 10 Chen po Legs bzang ba
(f) 11 rTses dang lHa dbang dpal 'byor
   He was the abbot when the KDSN was composed (1529).
(f) 12 Chos kyi grags
(f) 13 bSam gtan mchog
(f) 14 Gang pa kha ba Chos rje dPal 'byor rgya mtsho
(f) 15 Blo bzang bstan 'phel
(f) 16 rTses dang Sangs rgyam
(f) 17 sTag lung brag pa Blo gros rgya mtsho (1546–1618)
   He was the 30th abbot of dGa’ ldan [VDSP 77].
(f) 18 Gling smad abbot rje dKon mchog chos 'phel (1573–1646)
   He is said to have been born at Gra nang. After retiring as the principal of Ra ba stod college, he became the general abbot of Gling smad and when he was 54 years old (1626), he moved to dGa’ ldan monastery and spent twelve years as its abbot [VDSP 78]. He was also known as a personal adviser to the fifth Dalai Lama. In the fifth Dalai Lama’s autobiography, he is called Gling med zhabs drung (information received from Prof. Zuiho Yamaguchi).
(f) 19 Khe gsum chos mdzad Blo bstan
(f) 20 sPyan gyas Rab 'byams pa
(f) 21 gSal khang Dam chos (or gSer khang pa Dam chos rnam rgyal)
   He was the author of the b Tsan po bsDus grwa [TDKB 663.6].
(f) 22 Zur khang pa Kun dga’
(f) 23 Nang ra ba Blo bzang don grub
(f) 24 Brag sgo Phun tshogs rgyal mtshan
(f) 25 sPyan gyas bsTan rgyam
(f) 26 lHa sa pa Phun tshogs chos ldan
(f) 27 Jo gdan pa bsTan mdzes
(f) 28 Lung rigs
(f) 29 Shing tshang pa Ngag phun
(f) 30 rTse tshogs Phun blo grags pa
(f) 31 gSang sngags mkhar ba Tshul khrims rin chen
He was abbot when the VDSP was composed.

(g) Nyang rong College

The abbatial succession of the Nyang rong college can be listed as follows:

(g) 1 Chos rje rGyal dbang ba (or rGyal dbang kha che)
   It is said that there was an abbot named Chos rje rab 'byams pa mtshem dbyangs rgyal as a predecessor of rGyal dbang ba [PKPB 63–64], but almost nothing is known about this person. Chos rje rGyal dbang ba was a disciple of g-Yag phrug Sangs rgyas dpal (1348–1414). He was called mTshungs med chos rje. After retiring as the principal of Nyang rong college he moved to Phen yul sGo mo and visited Šākya bSod nams, the founder of sBe ser, to study the teaching of the Lam rim [STCB 1975: 31].

(g) 2 Slob dpon Grags pa bkra shis (or mKhas grub..)
   He was a student of rGyal tshab rje.

(g) 3 Drung Kun dga’ bzod pa
   He had studied under Byams dbyangs chos rje, the founder of 'Bras spung.

(g) 4 mNga’ ris rab ’byams pa Sangs rgyas bzang po
   He was a nephew of Shes rab bzang po, who was a disciple of Tsong kha pa [KDSN 402].

(g) 5 Drung bZang dpal pa

(g) 6 Rin po che Don yod pa (or ’Jam dbyangs Don yod dpal ldan) (1445–1524)
   This Don yod dpal ldan was born in gTsang in 1445, and had studied in the Byes pa college of Se ra monastery. He was appointed both the abbot of Nyang rong college and the principal of Se ra byes pa college. When he was 72 years old he became the general abbot of Se ra monastery. He trained many scholars including the famous bSod nams grags pa, Se ra rje btsun pa and others [KDSN 402].

(g) 7 Blo gros lhun grub

(g) 8 sKu skye pañ chen
   He is also included among abbots of the Shar rtse college of dGa’ ldan monastery [STCB 37].

(g) 9 bKra shis dpal ’byor

(g) 10 Drung chos bKra shis pa (or Dam chos..)
   The abbot when the KDSN was composed. According to the STCB, he was from dNga’ ris.

(g) 11 dGe legs rgya mtsho

(g) 12 Dam chos ’byung gnas

(g) 13 Blo bzang btsan ’phel
   According to the STCB, this Blo bzang btsan ’phel was born in Mal gro, and had studied at 'Bras spung monastery. He became the abbot of Nyang rong college, but at that time there was a calamitous fire, so he had the whole college move to dGa’ ldan Shar rtse college. For that reason, after Blo bzang bstan ‘phel the succession of the abbots of Nyang rong college is just same as that of Shar rtse college.

(g) 14 Gling Ārya (or bsTan pa rgyal mtshan)
(g) 15 rJe bSod nams lhun grub (or dBu mdzad..)
(g) 16 Shar chen don grub seng ge
(g) 17 rJe btsun bSod nams bkra shis
   The VDSP replaces (g) 15 and (g) 16, and does not include bSod nams bkra shis’s name. We insert it based on the STCB.
(g) 18 rJe Ngag dbang rnam rgyal
(g) 19 ’Bum rams pa bSod nams rnam rgyal
(g) 20 Khams ston Sangs rgyas bstan pa rgya mtsho
(g) 21 Thang skya ba Don grub dpal ldan (or mKhan chen..)
(g) 22 rDrung bZang po rnam rgyal (or mKhas dbang…)
   According to the STCB, during this period, Shar rtse college became so big that they could not come to gSang phu frequently except during the Summer session (dbyar chos). It seems that around this time the Nyang rong college actually disappeared at gSang phu as a permanent college, though nominally it continued to be counted as one of the griwa tshang.
(g) 23 sKyor mo lung pa Rin chen bKra shis (or mTshungs med chos kyi rje..)
(g) 24 mKhas dbang Sangs rgyas 'phrin las
(g) 25 Ngag dbang rin chen
(g) 26 Brag dgon pa bKra shis rnam rgyal
(g) 27 Brag logs pa Blo bzang skal ldan
(g) 28 sNye thang pa dGe ’dun shes rab
(g) 29 Byams gling Tshul khrims rnam rgyal (or mKhan chen)
(g) 30 Chos lung pa Blo bzang rgyal mtshan
(g) 31 Brag nag Blo bzang bkra shis
(g) 32 rGyud stod pa Blo bzang yon tan pa
   The abbot when the VDSP was composed.
   According to the STCB, after Blo bzang yon tan pa the succession proceeds:
   33 Rin chen dpal bzang →34 Ngag dbang yar ’phel →35 rJe Blo bzang bsam ’grub →36 rJe btsun Blo bzang bstan pa →37 rje btsun bla ma mKhyen brtse’i ’byung gnas →38 rje btsun Blo bzang bstan ’dzin →39 rJe Byams pa rig ’dzin
   [ [PKPB 63-65] states that he occupied the throne at the time the work was composed, that is in 1744] →40 rJe btsun Ngag dbang tshul khrims →41 Blo bzang tshe ring →42 Blo bzang don grub →43 sKal bzang phun tshogs →44 mKhan chen Chos dbang rgya mtsho →45 mKhan chen Chos grags bgres pa →46 Blo bzang chos grags gnyis pa →47 Blo bzang bstan dar →48 rJe btsun Blo bzang chos ’phel →49 Ngag dbang yon tan. (The STCB was written in 1814.)
CONCLUSION

That then is the extent of the historical information now available to me on the abbots of the dGe lungs pa colleges of gSang phu. It is to be hoped that more sources will turn up one day on the other colleges, since not a single abbatial succession of the Sa skyab pa colleges can yet be traced.

Notes

1) To allow readers easier use of the appended name index of abbots, I would like to give here both lists of the abbatial successions of the main monasteries previously presented by van der Kuijp [Kuijp 1987: 111/113-4] and myself [Onoda 1989: 208-9/211].

* From sMad 6 to sMad 38 please refer to the list in [Onoda 1989: 209-210].

After the seventh abbot, our descriptions do not coincide. My version [Onoda 1989: 208-212] is mostly dependent on the description found in the SPDR, which can be read as follows: [SPDR 10a1] Cha-pa'i rjes su btTags pa dBang phyug seng ge gdan sa lo ingal gTsang-pa 'Jam seng gis lo bu gsum rdi'i dus su gling btod smad gyes shing!... [SPDR 10a3] 'Jam seng gis rjes

[SPDR 10b4] gling bsdod kyi gdan rabs ni 'Jam dpal seng ge yin mthon mong ba yin la|de'i rjes su Zha scon hral mos lo lnga|Blo gros 'bar gnyis lo lnga|dMyal zhi| 'Jam dpal rdo rjes lo bgyad gdan sa mdzad de|... [SPDR 10b4] dMyal zhi|ig rjes su rGya 'chings ru ba Shes rab dbang phyng bis lo bo dbyad gdan sa mdzad|...

2) Cf. [Kuij 1987: 116]; van der Kuip depends on the description of the VDSP, and he follows the counting of eleven grwa tshangs according to the VDSP. The VDSP, which was written in the 17th cent., clearly says: dga' ldan pa'i grwa tshang bzhi dang|sa skyai' grwa tshang bdun (there are four colleges of the dGa' ldan sect, and seven of the Sa skya) [VDSP 126]. The four dGa' ldan pa colleges here are "Rwa-ba-stod [-smad], Spel-ser, Nyi-ma-thang and Nyang-rong [Kuij 1987: 116]."

However the TDKB, which was written in the 18th century, explains that Ra ba smad differs from Ra ba stod, and counts them as belonging to the Sa skya pa and the dGe lugs pa respectively [TDKB 1156]. The TDKB does not record the name of the sGros rnying and sGros gsar colleges, but says: bzhi dge legs parlhang ma drug sa skya pa ste... (Four are of the dGe lugs pa and the remaining six are Sa skya pa). In this context, "six" stands for rNam ra ba Dwags po, rNam rgyal gSer khang, Khu be, Ra ba smad, Phreng po zhi and 'Phan yul gNas gso.

3) Previously I [ONoda 1989: 204/212] confused the author of the SPDR, Kun dga' byung gnas, with the founder of Dwags po college, Kun dga' bkra shis; they are separate personages.

4) See [Kuij 1987: 117].

The following index of names of abbots comprises those that occur in both my first paper [ONODA 1989: 203–219] and in this present article. Numbers indicate the place in the abbatial succession, with the relevant monastery identified as follows:

sMad: Succession of the Lower Monastery (Gling sMad)
sTod: Succession of the Upper Monastery (Gling sTod)
(a): Succession of the Nyi ma thang College of Upper Monastery
(b): Succession of the sBe ser College of Upper Monastery
(f): Succession of the Ra ba stod College of Lower Monastery
(g): Succession of the Nyang rong College of Lower Monastery

サンプ・ネットク僧院所属の学堂座主系譜

小野田 俊 蔵

サンプ・ネットク僧院は、ゴク・レクベーシェーラブ (rNgog Legs pa'i shes rab) が、ラサの南にニジェンの東にあたるサンプの地に建立した僧院である。レクベーシェーラブはチベット仏教後期の立役者であるアティーシャ (Atiśa 982-1054) の直弟子である。彼は中央チベットを巡錬中のアティーシャをラサのトゥルナ（大招寺）に迎えて教えを受けた。そしてその後にこの僧院を1073年に創設し、律と教の道場を開いたのである。

サンプ・ネットク僧院は当初は一応カダム派に所属せられる僧院であったが、実際には宗
