The current volume is based on the workshop 'Wartime Japanese Anthropology in Asia and Oceania' that took place in December 1999 at the National Museum of Ethnology in Osaka. The workshop was planned and conducted as part of the 'Anthropology and History' project of the National Museum of Ethnology. We should like to thank the National Museum of Ethnology for its support and in particular the Director General at the time, Professor Naomichi ISHIGE, and the administrative staff. We should also like to thank the participants from Japan and abroad. Special gratitude is due to Professor George W. Stocking, Jr. of the University of Chicago, who participated in the workshop and lead the discussions in the sessions. On the occasion of the workshop he delivered a special lecture, entitled 'From Eurocentric Anthropology to National Anthropologies and Beyond: Reflections of an Anglophone Historian of Anthropology,' to a general academic audience. We hope that this volume will contribute to the growing exchange of ideas between Asian and Western anthropologists.

It took a considerable amount of time to turn the idea to convene a workshop on wartime anthropology into reality. It was made possible with the support of the National Museum of Ethnology. It also took time to edit and prepare this volume for publication. We gladly acknowledge the full-hearted support that we received from organisations and individual scholars. The National Museum of Ethnology again gave us its full support in helping to produce this publication. We should also like to acknowledge the support received from the Netherlands Organisation for Scientific Research in the editing stage of the project.

Notes on Contributors

Jan van Bremen obtained his Ph.D. at the University of California at Berkeley in 1985. He worked in the Department of Anthropology at the University of Amsterdam (1975-1986) before joining the Centre for Japanese and Korean Studies in Leiden University in 1987. His specialisations are anthropology, folklore studies, intellectual history, religion and society in Japan. He edited Ceremony and ritual in Japan: Religious practices in an industrialized society with D. P. Martinez (1995); Horizons of understanding: An anthology of theoretical anthropology in Europe with Vesna Godina and Jos Platenkamp (1996); and Anthropology and colonialism in Asia and Oceania with Akitoshi SHIMIZU (1999). Presently he is editing a volume on Ghosts and modernity in Asia with John Knight, and a volume on Asian anthropology with Eyal Ben-Ari and Sayed Farid Alatas.

CH'OE Kilsŭng (崔吉城) is Professor of Social Anthropology at Hiroshima University. He graduated from Seoul National University and obtained his Ph.D. from Tsukuba University. He published numerous articles and books on shamanism, ancestor worship and colonisation in Korea and Japan. For several years he has been conducting research on the legacy of Japanese rule in Sakhalin, Russia. In this regard, he edited 『日本植民地と文化変容』 (The Japanese rule and acculturation in Korea, 1994).

Kevin M. Doak, M.A. and Ph.D. from the University of Chicago (1983, 1989), is the Nippon Foundation Endowed Chair and Chairman of the Department of East Asian Languages and Cultures at Georgetown University. He is the author of Dreams of difference: The Japan Romantic School and the crisis of modernity (University of California, 1994) and more recently the co-editor of Constructing nationhood in modern East Asia (University of Michigan Press, 2001) and the author of 'Building national identity through ethnicity' (The journal of Japanese studies, 2001) and many other articles and chapters. He is currently writing a book on the problem of ethnicity and national identity in modern Japan.

Bachamiya Abdul Hussainmiya, B.Ed. (Hons.), B.A. (Hons.), Ph.D., Associate Professor of History at University of Brunei Darussalam, and a Consultant to the Brunei History Centre. His publications include Orang Rejimen: The Malays of the Ceylon Rifle Regiment (1990); Lost cousins: The Malays of Sri Lanka (IBKKM Monograph 2, 1986); Sultan Omar Ali Saifuddin III and Britain: The making of Brunei Darussalam (1995); and The Brunei Constitution of 1959: An inside history (2000).

NIE Lili (聶莉莉) is Professor of Cultural Anthropology at Tokyo Woman's Christian University. She obtained her M.A. in sociology at Beijing University, and Ph.D. in cultural anthropology at the University of Tokyo in 1990. She conducted research in China and published 『劉堡——中国東北地方の宗族とその変容』 (Liu Village: Lineage and change in Northeastern China, 1992). She also co-edited 『大地は生きている——中国風水の思想と実践』 (Living earth: The thought and practice of Chinese geomancy, 2000). Her current interests of research include the mobility and autonomy of Koreans in China, the memory of damages by Japanese germ warfare in the Second World War, and text-analysis of revolutionary songs from the viewpoint of ideological influence of totalitarian socialist regime on the Chinese people.

MIYAZAKI Kōji (宮崎恒二) obtained his Ph.D. at Leiden University in 1988. He is currently Professor at the Research Institute for Languages and Cultures of Asia and Africa, the Tokyo University of Foreign Studies. He has been conducting research on the Javanese and Malay folk knowledge and on migration in the Insular Southeast Asia. He edited Making of multi-cultural Sabah (2003), and published numerous papers including 'Javanese-Malay: Between adaptation and alienation' (Sojourn 15(1), 76-99, 2000).

NAKAO Katsumi (中生勝美) is Associate Professor at the Graduate School of Literature and Human Sciences, Osaka City University. His research interests have been in the family, kinship and village organisations in China. He has been exploring a historical review of Japanese anthropology, particularly in the context of World War II. He edited 『植民地人類学の展望』 (Perspectives on colonial anthropology, 2000), and published 『中国農村の権力構造と社会変化』 (Power structure and social change in Chinese villages, 1990) as well as numerous papers.

Atsushi NOBAYASHI (野林厚志) is Associate Professor at the National Museum of Ethnology, Osaka. He obtained his Ph.D. from the Graduate School of Advanced Studies. His research interests are in ethno-archaeological studies of Aboriginal peoples in Taiwan, particularly of hunting activity of Paiwan and Tsou people. He has been conducting research in Taiwan and Yunnan, and has published numerous papers including 'Methodological discussion of the interpretation of faunal remains (Bulletin of the National Museum of Ethnology 25(2), 2000).

Shirō SASAKI (佐々木史郎), Ph.D., is currently Professor at the National Museum of Ethnology, Osaka. In recent years, he has investigated political and economic conditions of the Siberian indigenous peoples in Post-Soviet Russia. He has also pursued ethnic relations in Northeast Asia and North Japan in historical perspectives. Among his numerous publications, he authored 『北方から来た交易民——絹と毛皮とサントラン人』 (Traders from the North: Silk, fur and the Santan People, 1996), and edited 『モンゴロイド系諸民族の初期映像資料——シベリア・北海道・樺太篇』 (Early photographs of the Mongoloid peoples: Siberia, Hokkaido and Sakhalin) with Takeru AKAZAWA (1999), 『先史狩猟採集文化研究の新しい視野』 (New perspective on the study of prehistoric hunter-gatherer cultures, 2002) and 『開かれた系としての狩猟採集社会』 (Hunter-gatherer societies as open systems, 2002).

Teruo SEKIMOTO (関本照夫) received his M.A. in anthropology at the University of Tokyo. He is currently Professor of the Institute of Oriental Culture, University of Tokyo. His major research themes include Javanese peasants and the state in the New Order Indonesia, Javanese migrants in Malaysia and Surinam, and the economic-anthropological study of textile crafts in Java. He is the editor of 『国民文化が生まれる時』 (Nationalist cultural discourse in Asia Pacific, with Takeo FUNABIKI, 1994) and Handicrafts and industrial development in Southeast Asia (2000).

Akitoshi SHIMIZU (清水昭俊), M.A., is Professor of Social Anthropology at the Graduate School of Social Sciences, Hitotsubashi University. He has been conducting research on traditional and contemporary aspects of life among East Micronesian peoples, history of anthropology in Japan, and theoretical issues of the family. He is the author of 『家・身体・社会——家族の社会人類学』 (House, body and society: A social-anthropological study of the family, 1987), and edited Anthropology and colonialism in Asia and Oceania with Jan van Bremen (1999) and 『周辺民族の現在』 (The present for peripheral peoples, 1998).

Tsu Yun Hui (祖運輝) is Associate Professor in the Department of Japanese Studies, National University of Singapore. He has a B.A. from International Christian University and a Ph.D. from Princeton University. He has published works on the Chinese in Japan, colonial Taiwan, and Japan's southward advancement. Currently, he is interested in the place of nature in Kobe's post-war development. His recent papers include 'The Japanese cemetery in Singapore: On post-mortem identity and burial obligation' (Senri ethnological studies 62, 93-114, 2002) and 'Between heaven and the deep sea: Chinese maritime religion from the 11th to 19th Century' (East Asian history 23, 61-78).
