PREFACE

The bibliographies which follow are a partial product of a study group of customary laws in Southeast Asia and Taiwan organized at the National Museum of Ethnology in the fall of 1976 with the participation of anthropologists and historians affiliated with the Museum. The group has met bimonthly since then and has been discussing various aspects of customary laws of the region. In the course of these discussions, opinions were repeatedly expressed by the participants as to the desirability of having at hand a comparative checklist of important works on the subject under study which should be a convenient tool for a specialist of any one area to refer to studies in other area of the region. Hence the following bibliographies.

Beside a happy exception of the Bibliographical Introduction to Legal History and Ethnology now in progress at the Université de Bruxelles under the supervision of Professor John Gilissen, few attempt seems to have been made so far in compiling a bibliographic guide on customary laws of Southeast Asia from a comparative perspective. Unlike its predecessor which is prepared within the framework of juristic tradition, the present one is essentially a product of non-juristic scholarship; each compiler, whether he being an anthropologist or a historian, has collected materials according to his line of research. This has inevitably generated some inconsistency in the composition of each chapter, which the present editor did not attempt to rectify. His task is limited to a formalistic minimum.

Due to technical reasons, Vietnam, Malaysia and Singapore could not be covered in this series. The editor hopes that they may be included in a future project. Professor Masaji CHIBA of the Tokyo Metropolitan University who joined the group in 1978, has greatly encouraged the compilation and has given to the group not a few welcome advice as law specialist, while Professor Taryo OBAYASHI of the University of Tokyo, another new member since 1978 has contributed for the enrichment of the bibliography with his extensive knowledge of Western scholarship in this field. The editor wishes to extend his sincere thanks to these new colleagues for their thoughtful cooperation.

This bibliography is a tentative and by no means a systematic or inclusive one. Because the concept "adat law studies" has so many connotations, I shall focus mainly on the works by the Leiden school of adat law studies and some other studies related to it. Therefore, a lot of works by Dutch ethnologists, historians and other social scientists, which also refer to Indonesian data law, do not appear in this bibliography.

1912-22 Banzoku kanshu chosa hōkokusho 『蕃族慣習調査報告書』 (Reports on the Customs of the Formosan Aborigines,) 5 volumes, 8 books. Taihoku: Formosa.

Regarded as the most classic and fundamental ethnographies of the native groups in Formosa. All the data were collected by extensive fieldwork during the years of 1909-1918. Each volume presents particularly a wealth of detailed informations on customary laws of family, marriage, kinship, and ownership and inheritance of property.

Volume 1: the Atayal

Edited by Yudo Kojima, 1915. 384 pp.

The regional diversity of customary laws among the Atayal are described to some extent.

Volume 2: the Ami and the Puyuma

Edited by Kiroku Kawano, 1915. 472 pp.

Volume 3: the Saiset

Edited by Yudo Kojima and Shinzo Yasuhara, 1917. 189 pp.

Volume 4: the Tsou

Edited by Yudo Kojima, 1918. 302 pp.

Volume 5: the Paiwan, including the Rukai

Edited by Yudo Kojima and others, 1920-22. 226 (No. 1) + 452 (No. 3) + 451 (No. 4) + 140 (No. 5) pp.

This volume is divided into 5 separate books, but the Number 2 of the volume has never been published.
